VOL. 111, NO. 100. CINCINNATI. MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 4, 1860. Remantic Napitals in New York - The Strength of Free Love.

Some thirty years ago there lived in the city of London, an opulent Jewish banker of the name of B. As rich men usually have, the subject of the present sketch had a lovely daughter rejoicing in the acriptural name of Sarah. As Sarah reached the age of womanhood, her beauty, and coupled with the father's wealth, drew to her feet many sultors, only one, however, could gain the prize, and that one was H., the son of a rich Polish nobleman. But when did the "course of true love run smooth?" H. and his father became mixed up in one of the many revolutions that have occurred in Poland, their estates were confiscated, and they were obliged to fee for their lives. With the flight of H.'s riches, R. discovered that his Intended Son-in-law would not do, and so told the young people. The lovers separated with vows of eternal constancy, H. emigrating to this country, and Sarah remaining in London. But as the copy book says, "out of sight out of mind," and so in this case. The sea had rolled between the lovers for about a year, when a rich suitor paid his addresses to Sarah, who

A Pair Saugaler Arrested A Paris Tebacco Manufactery Expessed:

A young girl was recently arrested in Paris for selling what was supposed to be sauggled to bacco, but she positively refused to say where she lived, and it was suspected that she was connected with a regular gang, carrying on their fradulent practices on a large scale. It having been afterward discovered that the parents of the Police went to the spot indicated, which he found to be an isolated house, communicating with a garden, and well calculated for any illicit operations. Having knocked and rung several times without having been able to obtain admission, the Commissary, in a loud voice, ordered the desired effect, for the door was opened by a man. On entering the place, a strong smell of tobacco was perceived, and lying about were a quantity of wrappers with labels of different kinds, such as Maryland, Levant, Virginia, &c.

In an adjoining room was a woman lying in bed, apparently very ill, and the Commissary did not disturb her, but proceeded with his search through the other parts of the premises, where all kinds of apparatus for the manusciure of spurious cigars, and also a quantity of purdered wood, chippings of burnt leather, and other substances, intended to be used in making a composition sold as sauff, were found. On again entering the room where the woman lay, the Commissary, who had begun to entertain margicions that her illness was feigned, and that she had thrown herself on the bed to conceal something under her, ordered her to get up. This she at last did, and beneath the mattress he discovered a sack filled with the ends of partly burnt cigars, probably picked up in the streets or cafes, and which were to be used in the manufacture of new ones. The man and his wife were arrested.

Lest.

A fearfully destructive tornado, says Saturday's Pittsburg Post, visited a little town called Maysville, in Clarion County, Wednesday last, about noon. The little village, which was composed of a grist-mill, saw-mill, store, tavern, and some six or eight houses, stables, &c., situated on Redbank Creek, was entirely blown away; the timbers of the buildings, household furniture, beds, bedding, tools, &c., being scattered in every direction, amid the wildest confusion, consternation and lamentation of the terrified and suffering inhabitants. For a distance of ten miles along the bank of the creek the scene is described by eye-wifnesses as terrible to look on. Large forest trees were torn from their roots and hurled through the air like straws. We have not been able to learn the full particulars, or the names of the killed and injured, but have been told that some seven or eight persons have already been found dead, while a great many are missing, and others, including many women and children, had their arms and legs broken, and were otherwise seriously injured.

PROTECTION OF THE PONY EXPRESS ROUTE.

A dispatch from St. Joseph, Mo., says: At last accounts the hostile Indians were all to the north of the Pouy Express and Salt Lake mail and emigrant route, and the troops will be so posted as to keep that soute open. The Indians on the eastern side of the mountains, extending north into Oregon, and westward into the interior of Utah, number probably 2,000, and from their contiguity with Mormons and other unavoidable causes, are all liable to become hostile to Americans, unless permanent means are taken by the Government to restrain them.

The Steamers Duncan F. Kenner, B. E. Clark, and a Preight Barge Destroyed by Fire—Two Schooners in Flames.

The telegraph has already mentioned this accident, but Thursday's New Orleans Delta gives these particulars A terrific conflagration occurred about one o'clock this morning, at the lower steambost landing, in the Second District, adjoining the lower Ficayune Tier, destroying the splendid Bayou Sara and Coast packet D. F. Kenner, belonging to the New Orleans and Bayou Sara Company, and the steamer B. E. Clark, owned by the Opelonass Hailroad Company, and used as a forry-boat, together with a large freight-barge lying moored alongside the Clark, also the property of the Opelonass Railroad Company. Two small schooners, lying at the head of the Picayune Tier, and next to the B. E. Clark, were considerably damaged by the fire, most of their sails and rigging being consumed.

The fire broke out in the main cabin of the D. F. Kenner, and those who were asleep aboard had barely time to escape in their night-clothes. Many of them jumping from the texas to the lower deck, before the whole boat was in flames. The wind being high, the fire went like a whirlwind, and burnt up the fine steamer in the shortest imaginable time. The Kenner was valued at $40,000, but was only insured for $25,000, $20,000 of which risk being covered in this city, and $5,000 up the country.

copy book says, "out of sight out of mind," and so in this case. The sea had rolled between the lovers for about a year, when a rich suitor paid his addresses to Sarah, who accepted and married him. H. was almost distracted when he heard the news, but reflection come to his sid, he consoled himself by also marrying.

Years passed on; the husband of Sarah died last year, leaving her a widow, penniless and with eleven children. In the meantime the wife of H. had died, leaving him eight children. When H. heard of the abject condition of his first love, all his old affection returned. He pictured his Sarah poor, and with a large family dependent upon her, which resulted in his sending for her and her children. After mutual reiterations of unchanged affection, the marriage day was fixed, and on Sunday last the parties were married by a Jewish minister. They numbered one hundred and four years between them—the lady being fifty years of age, with traces of her former great beauty still existing, and the husband being fifty-four years old. The newly-married couple have a grown up family of nineteen olive-branches to twine around their domestic hearthstone. risk being covered in this city, and $5,000 up the country.

The Kenner was to have left for Bayou Sara this morning at nine o'clock, and had on board a large amount of up freight; but all the books having been destroyed, it is impossible to give an estimate of the amount of freight received on board. The flames of the Kenner soon communicated to the B. E. Clark, which steamer was lying wedged in between the freight barge and the Kenner, and before any attempt could be made to cut her adrift, she was enveloped in flames, which in turn communicated to the freight boat. The B. E. Clark had no freight on board, and there was only about one hundred barrels of flour and a small number of makes of corn on board of the barge, most of which was taken off upon the levee and saved. The B. E. Clark is rather an old steamer, and was estimated by the company to be worth about $10,000.

Lady Byron took such an interest in philanthropic movements, that besides subscribing liberally to numerous charities, she gave up her house and land at Peckleton, in Leicestershire, to aid the reformatory movement. She also took a lively interest in the philanthropic enterprises of this country. Not long since, a New York gentleman performed an act of charity in educating a poor boy and finding him a situation, with the understanding that the lad was to devote a small percentage of his earnings toward assisting other poor boys. Lady Byron happened to hear of this, and was so much pleased with this practical manifestation of charity that she sent over a request for a Dagurreotype of the $10,000.

The freight barge, we were informed by the company, was worth not less than $7,000. Neither of these boats was insured. Most of the schooners lying at the Picayune Tier cut adrift and avoided the fire, but one of them named the Louiss, and another, the name of which we did not yet, as the stern-hoard was burnt off, suffered considerably by the fire, being jammed up against the Clark. The flames aboard the schooners caught the salls, which were stowed away snugly upon the fames aboard the schooners caught the salls, which were stowed away saugly upon the booms, and then ran up the greased masis, and formed bouquets of fire at the cross-trees where the tarred stays and rigging fasten. The Missostune of Having a Bad Chanacture.—The importance of preserving a

The fire in one point of view was a grand one, the roaring, rushing flames illuminating the whole river, and casting a lurid glare upon the water, and the schooners and barges with their leg-of-mutton stood out like objects in Italian pictures, where the reflection of an eruption of Vesuvius is shown upon the sea. A Supposed Famous Defaultes Honest After All.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Heroid says: You will re-member what a noise was made through the QUEEN'S BIRTEDAY.—Our lady readers will be interested in hearing how the ladies of the royal family of England were dressed on the occasion of the drawing-room reception on the Queen's birthday. The Queen herself wore a train of white ribbed silk, trimmed with ruches of crape, white roses and white bugles, the petticoat, white crape over white silk, trimmed to correspond; while her headdress was composed of a diadem of opals and diamonds, white feathers and white crape veil. The Princess Alice wore a train of rich white crystalline silk, trimmed with tulle and bows of ribbon; the petticoat of rich glace silk, bouillonne of tulle, dotted with bows of ribbons. Her head-dress consisted of a wreath of lifles of the valley and camellias, ornamented with diamonds. The Princess Mary of Cambridge wore a white moire train, lined and bordered with pink, trimmed with Mechlin lace, bouquets of howers and silver cord; the petticoat of pink glace silk, covered with puffings of crape and handsome tunic of Brussels lace; the corrage to correspond; ornaments, pearls and diamonds. CLEVAR SATIRE ON THE FARRIONS OF AMERwhole country twenty years ago, about the defalcation of Samuel S. Swartzwout, Collector at New York. Few people would be prepared to believe that, although he fied the country to avoid arrest and prosecution, yet he turned out ultimately on the final settlement of his accounts, not to be a debtor at all, but a creditor of the Government. Yet such, I was informed a few days since by Attorney-General Black, is the fact. Each tenant will be allowed to purchase property from the Provincial Government on similar terms. CLEVER SATIRE ON THE FARMONS OF AMERICAN WOMEN.—The following satire on the present style of female dressing, is conveyed in an assumed letter from one of the Japanese Embassy, to a friend at home. We find it very difficult to comply with the demands of our sovereign, forbidding us to touch the women of this country. Not from any disposition on our part to disobey, but from their desire to seite us by our hands. They are apparently allowed here the greatest freedom, but it is only in appearance. Every woman, married or single, is fastened in a cage of bamboo or flexible steel, extending from the waist to the feet. This stems to be so arranged as give them no uneasiness, but they are very much ashathed of it, and conceal it under so menty coverings that it renders their appearance quite indicrous. They are unrestricted as to the upper part of their persons which they are permitted to expose as much as they wish. This they seem to avail themselves of, and on all occasions of high ceramony wear very low dresses. Direct Trade Between France and Virginia.—The cargo of the bark Lone Ster, the pioneer of direct trade between France and Virginia, will be sold at auction, on the 6th, in the city of Norfolk. A Pashionamic Young Lady the Authories of an Excellent Novel.—The new movel, entitled Rulledge, recently published, is having a large sale. SUICIDE OF A RICH MAN PROM PRAR OF POY

SCICIDA OF A REAL STANDARD STAR OF THE STA

A Basy RECEIVER-GENERAL.—The King of Naples (says a Paris journal) has appointed one Master Manisako, a naby three and a half rears old, the receiver-general at Capus. This was done as a mark of especial favor to the fither of the calid, who is notorious in Italy under the unenviable title "The Hangman of Sicily."

A Young Widow Cownides a Slandress.

Mrs. Lynn, a pretty young widow, cowhided a man by the name of Agmbrad, in Syracula, N. Y., a day or two since, for maligning her good name. The man struck her during the operation, inflicting an ugly-looking bruise over one eye. They were both accested, and the man promised to fully retract everything he had said.

Mysranious Ball-arsono in Ruode Island,—The Providence Journal gives an account of a case of mysterious bell-ringing in that city. The ringing commenced on Thursday evening, and continued at intervals for some three hours. So annoying did the ringing become that the wire of one bell was detached and the other bell was muffled by being completely enveloped in anapkin. The phenomenon was witnessed by several persons, who thoroughly examined every part of the bell apparatus, but could discover no cause which tended to throw any light upon the occurrence. One gentleman present took hold of the knob and held it firmly, he says there was much force exerted to move the knob, while he held it, and that he distinctly felt a power attempting to pall it. As soon as he let go the bell would begin to move, and flew rapidly backward and forward, as though some one pulled and then suddenly let go. He held the knob several times, and in every instance with the same result. At the same time, the bell would ring by a movement communicated to the wire between the first and second director.

GRAND UNDERSO BALL AT PARIS-MAGNIFI cent Exposure of Nume Brautiss.—A Paris The Gladiator correspondent says:

correspondent says:

A "painful" feature of the gorgeous ball at the Hotel d'Elbe, in Paria, was the total disregard to delicacy in the greater part of the ladies' costumes, the generality of the toilettes being a complete undress; shoulderstays and sleeves were discarded, and in most cases replaced by a string of precious stones, lightly holding together the scanty draperies of the coreage, which left exposed the bust and shoulders.

We do not know, but we doubt very much if this grand undress on the part of the ladies was in the least sense "painful" to the gentlemen present. If they received pain, we presume they hore their sufferings with due resignation.

A FACTORY ON THE LIMITED PARTNERSHOP PAINCIPLE.—In the village of Saxton's River, Vt., a large boot and shoe factory is now being completed, which is owned and is to be operated by a company formed upon the principle of limited partnership. The work for all parts of the shoes is here to be made in the factory, and chiefly by machinery of the best description and latest improvements, among which are to be two pegging machines, each capable of pegging five hundred pains per day. The goods made are to be for the Southern and Western trade.
